Dear Parents,

Re: Recommended Reading to Parents – Building Bridges with your Teenagers

"At times, I really wonder if my girl has any purpose in her life. All she does is to eat, play, sleep and not do anything useful...."

"My teenager is not doing well in his studies. Do you mean he still has potential?"

"I've been talking to him and yet he doesn't seem to understand...."

Do the above statements sound familiar to you? If so, please be assured that you are not alone. Many parents feel the same way when their children are not turning out the way they want them to.

SIS-PTA would like to introduce the book, "Building Bridges with your Teenagers - key to effective parenting and communication" by Alice Lee to you. Our school had reviewed the book and found it suitable for our parents.

In the book, family counsellor Alice Lee shares with readers her experiences as a mother of teenagers and other real-life case-studies that she encountered during the course of her career. She provides constructive guide for parents to smoothen relationships with their teenagers. This book will encourage you to persevere on to seek new understanding and develop communication and nurture strong relationships with your teenagers.
